If yes, how many signatories are there (including the primary submitter)? 138
QC10. Executive Summary (word limit: 250 words fully presented on this page only). In the space below succinctly highlight the key elements of your case for upgrading the rating of the designated journal. Please use a "bullet point" style where possible.

- Accounting education is a small field with six specialist English language journals. One, Issues in Accounting Education (Issues), is ranked 'A'; three, Accounting Education: an International Journal (AE), Journal of Accounting Education (JAcEd), and Advances in Accounting Education: teaching and curriculum innovation (Advances) are ranked 'B'; and, two are ranked 'C'.
- Because of the size of the field, citations are low. It is use in the classroom of insights gathered from publications in these journals which is the key indicator of impact and quality, not citations.
- AE is acknowledged as an A journal by eminent scholars worldwide. (Appendix C3)
- AE's editorial board is vastly more internationally diverse than Issues' (Appendix C1;C4), with which it is recognised as being of similar quality by the UK Association of Business Schools, specialist groups in the UK (BAFA, AECA, ANPCONT), Brazil (AMPCON), the president of the global umbrella body for accounting education, IAAER, and two past-presidents of the European Accounting Association (EAA) (Appendix C3); by the Australian President of ACCA and the President of the New Zealand Institute of Chartered Accountants (Appendix C8); by the sponsors of this application, the AFAANZ Accounting Education SIG; the ANZ accounting education research community: 117 signatories; plus 16 ANZ departments/schools. (Appendix C8)
- AE's authorship has been and is consistently international, vastly more so than Issues during its existence. Authors from ANZ are now the most frequent publishers in the journal. (Appendix C4)
- AE is comprehensively indexed and ranked globally. (Appendix C2)
SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: APPENDIX CHECKLIST

The ABDC invites further supplementary and supporting information to be submitted by way of appendices.

QC11. What supplementary information are you supplying (by way of appendices) to support your submission?

The following documents are attached in support of this application (please tick boxes as relevant):

- Appendix C1: List of Editorial Board Members
- Appendix C2: Description and Scope of Journal

Description

Accounting Education: an international journal is a peer-reviewed international journal devoted to publishing research-based papers and other information on key aspects of accounting education and training of relevance to practitioners, academics, trainers, students and professional bodies.

It is a forum for the exchange of ideas, experiences, opinions and research results relating to the preparation of students for careers in public accounting, managerial accounting, financial management, corporate accounting, controllership, treasury management, financial analysis, internal auditing, and accounting in government and other non-commercial organizations, as well as continuing professional development on the part of accounting practitioners.

The coverage includes aspects of accounting education and training policy, curriculum issues, computing matters, and accounting research as it impinges on educational or training issues.

The journal seeks to make available innovative teaching resource material that can be used by readers in their own institutions. As a necessary corollary to this, the journal seeks to publish papers dealing with the effectiveness of accounting education or training.

In addition to publishing original papers the journal also includes exemplars and reviews relating to what we teach, how we teach it, and how effective our endeavours are in providing an adequate educational and training base for accounting practice.

Peer Review Policy

All main articles, teaching resources and notes in this journal have undergone rigorous peer review based on initial screening by the Editor followed by double-blind refereeing involving two anonymous referees and an Associate Editor.

Publishing Frequency

6 issues per year

Aims

(i) to enhance the educational base of accounting practice by providing a forum for identifying, exploring and assessing issues relating to the academic and professional preparation of future accounting practitioners;

(ii) to promote excellence in accounting education and training by acting as a catalyst to facilitate improvements via such means as curriculum development, innovative learning methods, and new teaching materials/resources;

(iii) to stimulate research in accounting education and training and to disseminate the results of enquiries into the effectiveness of alternative teaching methods, assessment strategies, etc.;

(iv) to provide a means of highlighting the contributions which IT has to make to developing better accounting education and training - both in respect of relevant content and more effective delivery;
(v) to build links among those who teach, train and employ accounting/finance students and to offer a platform for the exchange of views reflecting the priorities to be attached by different parties to issues in the domain of accounting education and training;

(vi) to stimulate and develop the international (including comparative) dimensions of accounting education and training;

(vii) to assist in integrating the various elements in the overall system (aims, inputs, process, outputs) of accounting education and training into a coherent and aligned whole.

Accounting Education: an international journal is ranked in:

- SCOPUS (SNIPS; SJR pending – first entered 2010)

Re: Accounting Education: an International Journal
Letter of support for Accounting Education’s ranking as A in ABDC list

I write in support of an appropriately high ranking for Accounting Education: an International Journal in the revised Australian Business Dean’s Council Accounting (2013) list. I am currently Chair of the Consultative Advisory Group of the International Accounting Education Standards Board and a Past President of the European Accounting Association, having served as President of this, the second largest association of accounting academics and educators in the world, for two years up to May 2011.

I am also a member of the Editorial Review Board of Accounting Education: an international journal and of the Editorial Board of another European accounting research journal. Moreover, I act as ad hoc reviewer for papers submitted to a number of international accounting peer-reviewed journals, including Accounting, Auditing and Accountability Journal, a very significant journal for our discipline coming out of Australia.

Accounting Education: an International Journal has established itself over a long period as a journal of great significance to the global accounting education and research community. In my opinion, in the accounting education field, this journal ranks among the top two journals globally with influence not only on university accounting education but also on the educational policies and practices of professional accountancy bodies worldwide and their global representative body, The International Federation of Accountants (IFAC). Under the auspices of IFAC, the International Accounting Education Standards Board (IAESB) develops education standards and guidance to serve the public interest by strengthening the worldwide accountancy profession through the development and enhancement of education. As Chair of the Consultative Advisory Group for the IAESB, I am very conscious of IASB’s awareness of research published in Accounting Education: an International Journal and of the status of the journal in the eyes of the education standards’ setter. In sum, this journal has an immense impact on a very significant professional cohort within global society.
I would argue that given the journal's international credentials in terms of diversity and quality of its editorial board, contributors and reviewers, this journal deserves a higher ranking than currently proposed by the ABDC.

Accounting education research has developed over the years as a multidisciplinary multi-paradigm field of enquiry. The extent to which education practitioners in accounting increasingly reflect on the objectives of their craft, on its effectiveness when measured against quality criteria, often externally specified, and experiment with a range of education approaches can be directly attributed to the widespread impact of studies published in Accounting Education: an International Journal. The journal publishes empirical, experimental, methodological and critical studies following a rigorous double-blind review process. The quality of the review process is attested to by the eminence, experience and dedication of the editorial team of this journal. This includes the Editor, Associate Editor, Editorial Advisory and Review Board teams and the distinguished panel of ad hoc reviewers from all over the world who serve the journal (see for example, the list in the December 2012 issue, Vol. 21, No. 6, pp. 631-636).

In my view, inclusion of Accounting Education: an International Journal at rank A of the ABDC Journal List is merited because of the quality, range and impact of the research published, and the rigor of the review processes adopted. Moreover, given the signal provided by Journal Rankings' Lists, a relatively high ranking for this Journal in Australia is warranted to ensure that high quality research continues to inform global teaching practice in accounting and education policy in the accountancy profession.

Yours sincerely,

Subject: Accounting Education: an international journal (AE) published by Routledge

I am writing as an international scholar from the University of Parma, Italy, in support of an A ranking for AE. I think I am qualified for such recommendation. I serve on Editorial Boards of many academic journals, including AE and on the International Board of Advisors of Canadian Certified General Research Foundation. I am a member of several Italian, European and American Academies and professional organizations. Among my principal service roles to our academic community, I have been President of the European Accounting Association (1994-95) and Vice-President of the International Association for Accounting Education and Research, IAAER (1997-2008). I am on familiar terms with the challenges of publishing high quality journals, The European Accounting Review and Accounting in Europe being primary publications among many accounting journals. Amongst other things in 2007 I received in Moscow the Gold Medal and Well Deserving Certificate (first assignment to a non Russian person) from the Institute of Professional Accountants of Russia and an Honorary Professorship at Kuban State University, Economic Faculty, Krasnodar, Russia. I also previously served as Director of the Business Research Intitute of my same University (1984-2007).

I have been aware upon AE since its founding. Now in its 22-years existence, AE has established itself as a pre-eminent accounting research publication on an international basis, with readership around the globe, an international Editorial Board representative of famous scholars all over the world. AE is a hallmark for the international accounting community. It is its international focus which led to the recognition and support by IAAER. The journal has become an institution in its own right, an item of prestige, with a wealth of painstakingly arranged articles, carefully selected and classified. My opinion is that AE definitely qualifies as a top scholarly journal of its class (specialist accounting education).

I do recommend that you consider AE of an A ranking.

Sincerely,

2013 Journal Quality Review

To the Australian Business Deans Council,

I am writing this letter in support of an A ranking for Accounting Education: An International Journal. This journal, which is the official journal of The International Association for Accounting Education and Research (IAAER) is the English language journal of choice for Spanish accounting education researchers. AE is, without any doubt, a truly international journal – the only one in the field with both a truly international editorial board and a truly international authorship base of the leading researchers in the field, many of whom are also highly respected accounting scholars who publish regularly in other fields within the discipline. In comparison with Issues in Accounting Education (US-focused and ranked 'A'), AE has by far a higher proportion of international editorial board members and also publishes highest quality work from the widest range of countries.

In my opinion as editor of EDUCADE (the only Spanish journal in the area edited by the main Accounting Association in Spain: AECA), and based on my experience, as researcher in accounting education in the last 20 years, AE is the main specialized journal in the area, and is not logical to consider Accounting Education: an international journal as having a lower ranking than IAE.

To Australian Business Deans Council

I am writing this letter to ask you to support an increase in ranking of Accounting Education: an international journal from a current ‘B’ to an ‘A’. I do so in my capacity as Chair of the British Accounting and Finance Association (BAFA), Accounting Education, Special Interest Group.

The BAFA (previously known as the British Accounting Association until 2009-2010) is a UK based learned society which has been in existence since 1947. BAFA represents the single most important body of academics in the UK and aims to advance knowledge and understanding of education and research in all areas of accounting and finance. Whilst BAFA is UK based, its membership comprises international academics and representatives from leading firms of accountants. In addition to hosting an annual doctoral colloquium and conference, BAFA has eight special interest groups which represent the research interests of its members. The Accounting Education, Special Interest Group (SIG) is the oldest and the most significant of these groups. The SIG organises its own three day annual conference which is held at different locations throughout Europe, in addition to having a strong presence at BAFA’s annual conference. The SIG also has a mentoring programme for early career researchers.

Accounting Education: an international journal is the journal of choice for both UK and Irish accounting education researchers, and has been for over twenty years. In addition, the journal now attracts quality research from many international accounting education researchers: now exceeding the number of UK and Irish contributions. Some of the most influential and eminent writers from Australia, New Zealand and the USA have published in this journal. The truly international nature of the journal is also reflected in the makeup of the editorial board: eleven out of the 15 senior and associate editors are located outside the UK (5 of these coming from Australia and New Zealand alone) while 80% of the editorial advisory/review board are located at institutions other than those based in the UK. The ties with the Australian accounting education community have recently been strengthened as a result of the editor of the journal relocating to Griffith University, Brisbane.

My understanding of the Australian Business Deans Council list is that Issues in Accounting Education, is currently ranked ‘A’ whilst Accounting Education: an international journal is ranked ‘B’. A comparison of both journals, however, suggests that the latter is far more international in nature than the former, both in terms of the makeup of the associates/editorial board and in terms of those who publish in the journal (Issues in Accounting Education being a predominantly US based journal). An additional comparison here which is worthy of note relates to the range of methodologies published by both journals. Accounting Education: an international journal publishes work which draws on a wide range of methodologies which is vital to furthering our understanding of accounting education. Issues in Accounting Education, however, tends to be more limited to positivistic studies which limits it appeal to a wider audience.
I have been engaged in accounting education research activities for the last twenty years. Over these years, I have been involved with both journals in a number of ways and I would argue that the quality of Accounting Education: an international journal is, and the papers published within it, are, at least on a par with the US based Issues in Accounting Education. Therefore, I see no justification for Accounting Education: an international journal being currently ranked as a ‘B’ journal whereas Issues in Accounting Education is ranked as an ‘A’. The Officers of the British Accounting and Finance Association (BAFA), Accounting Education, SIG and I argue that both journals warrant a rank of ‘A’ under the Australian Business Deans Council list. We ask that you carefully consider our views in your review of the Australian Business Deans Council list. Thank you in advance.

Best regards

Professor of Accounting Education, Griffith University, Australia
Editor, Accounting Education: an International Journal

Dear Dr. Sangster,

This is to support your application for an increase in the rank of Accounting Education: an International Journal (AE) from “B” to “A”.

The editorial board of AE is truly international. Authorship profile and readership are also truly international. AE publishes articles with wider range of methodologies compared with other journals which focus on research in accounting education.

AE has a similar level of citations to another journal with a rank of “B”, whose editorial board, authorship, articles and methodologies are narrower than AE. However, I confess AE has been paid less attention from the North American researchers, simply because it is global and diversified, which sometimes does not fit the flavor of the North American researchers. From my view, it is a kind of “bias”.

I think AE should be regarded superior to other journals if the quality is the same.
I believe the rank of AE should be increased to “A”.

Again, I support an increase in the rank of Accounting Education: an International Journal (AE) from “B” to “A”.

Sincerely yours,

Kazuo Hiramatsu

Att. The Accounting 1501 Panel
Australian Business Deans Council
Ref.: 2013 Journal Quality Review

I take this opportunity to express my formal support for elevating the ranking of Accounting education: an international journal (AE). Journal rankings represent a quite complex topic, with both objective and subjective perspectives on quality, process and reach, driving science development while acting as a critical element for policy-making and merit recognition. My perspectives here are based on my history and context. Twenty years as a faculty member at USP (a leading public research university in Latin America, with more than 88,000 students), along with my long-term activities at University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (USA), fostered the development of several contacts with many deans, chairs, faculty members and scholars from all parts of the world, mostly in the areas of business, accountancy and education, helping me identify quality and potential in highly regarded academic environments. Also, as the scientific director of ANPCONT (the Brazilian Association of Graduate Programs in Accounting) and member of the IAAER Council, issues related to publication quality in our field are a key part of the agenda.

Not only the reach of AE issues (consistently a sound mix of lines of thoughts, contents and methodological approaches) and its natural use in leading research in our field (journal of choice of specialized readership), but the consistent quality derived from its pristine review process and truly international editorial board, represent reasons for its strong connection to IAAER and other scientific and professional associations around the world. Statistics of impact, including manuscripts prepared in languages other than English, clearly unveils this condition of a top-quality journal aiming at disseminating quality and innovation in accounting education around the globe. As rankings are evaluation instruments, they act as drivers for policy-making (i.e., ex ante, stimulating, or ex post, rewarding, authors and institutions) in the academic environment. It is only natural to recognize journals serving the academic community with such quality, by assigning them higher rankings. The field of accounting education, based on the complex dynamics experienced by accounting, needs strong journals and AE must signal such higher quality (i.e., not with a lower ranking than Issues in Accounting Education).

In addition, I firmly believe that Accounting Education: an international journal (AE) is a natural member of distinguished higher ranks in journal rankings in this field. As mentioned, AE has a widely perceived strong set of characteristics of a top quality research journal. Based on the aforementioned elements, I strongly recommend the recognition of such quality, supporting the elevation of AE ranking to “A.” If I may offer additional help, please feel free to contact me at edgardbc@usp.br or +55 11 3091 5950.

2013 Journal Quality Review

Dear Council Members:

I am writing in support of changing the journal ranking for Accounting Education: An International Journal from a B to an A. My understanding is that this would put Accounting Education on the same ranking level as Issues in Accounting Education, which is the major accounting education journal published in the US. The only other major accounting education journal is the Journal of Accounting Education, for which I served as Editor-in-Chief from 1998 until 2010.

Under the previous editorship of Richard Wilson and the current editorship of Alan Sangster, Accounting Education has published empirical research and instructional resources (case studies, projects) of the highest quality. Something that distinguished Accounting Education from the other two journals was the publication of special issues on important topics in accounting education. An international set of authors contributed to each of these special issues and each issue made an important contribution to the accounting education literature. In my opinion, Accounting Education has often been the leader in publishing articles that are relevant and useful to accounting educators.

I recommend raising the ranking for Accounting Education to an A to recognize its contribution to the accounting education literature, the quality of its editorial board, and the rigorous standards for publishing in the journal.

Sincerely,

James E. Rebele, PhD
Professor of Accounting, Robert Morris University (US)
Appendix C4: Comparisons with existing rated journals

In this appendix, comparison is made between AE and the other two most established journals in this specialist field. As indicated in the answer to QC5, we consider that the most comparable journal is Issues in Accounting Education, which is currently rated A compared to AE’s B. We consider AE to be of the same quality as Issues.

The other journal included in this appendix is Journal of Accounting Education. While it is also currently rated B, we do not consider it to be of the same standard as AE.

As can be seen below, Accounting education: an international journal has by far the widest international representation among its editorial team, with 28 countries represented among it 80 team members, including 17 (21%) from Australia and New Zealand.

This balance of source of output has been maintained, but with more now being published from ANZ: accounting education researchers from ANZ are currently the highest source of papers in the journal (32%), followed by the USA (24%) and the UK (22%).

The next table shows the UK Association of Business Schools (ABS) journal ranking scores for these three journals, along with their Scopus SNIP scores and the Scopus H index for papers published in 2011. The ABS list has been criticised heavily by the British Accounting and Finance Association and by many individuals for its undervaluing of research in some fields, including accounting education – see Volume 20(6) and 21(1) of AE for a full debate. The view was that a 2 was too low. The next level up is a 3, which equates, approximately, to an ABDC ‘A’, the ranking which Issues already has. We propose that this provides further evidence that AE should be considered of comparable quality to Issues and raised to the same level in the next version of the ABDC rankings. The evidence from the SNIP data and, in particular, the evidence of impact based on the H Index and the raw number of citations, for which AE has virtually twice the citation level per paper of Issues, also support an increase in the ranking of AE to the same level as Issues.

Finally, in their review of all 446 articles published in these journals during the period 2004-2009, Marriott et al. (2013) conclude:

A difference in approach was identified in conducting, analysing and presenting research published in these two regions. Papers published in [AE] were found to be more reflective, more likely to include analysis of qualitative data, more critical, more likely to be research papers rather than teaching notes or cases, and more likely to contain references to and utilise theory of pedagogy. In contrast, the papers published in the US were found to be more descriptive and more experimentally focused.

It is our view that, while it may be very different in nature and style, the research and scholarship published in AE is every bit as rigorous and stimulating and, of at least a similar level of quality to what is published in Issues.

2 Based on the papers published in 2011; data extracted 30th May 2013
3 Total cites of these papers in 2011, 2012, and 2013
4 Incomplete – four years of data are required. AE entered Scopus in 2010. It would not be unreasonable to expect that AE’s SNIP score would increase once four full years of data have been entered.

Hi, unfortunately, we’ve run into a slight hitch concerning the support that’s been offered for the ABDC application on behalf of Accounting Education: an international journal.

Thank you for your support for the Accounting Education: an international journal ranking upgrade application to the ABDC. We now find we have to comply with one particular submission regulation of theirs. We do apologise for seeking one further email from you.
